Project Warm's
First Line Weatherization

Project Warm's First Line Weatherization concentrates on simple low-cost measures performed by staff and trained volunteers. Since 1982, Project Warm has offered this FREE service to low and fixed income households; to repair drafty homes of leaky doors, broken windows and high utility costs.

First Line Weatherization provides an average 23% reduction in measured rate of air infiltration (conductive heat loss), results include:

- Reduced energy bills, which enables more money to be freed up for food, medications and other basic necessities
- Drastic decrease in drafts in the home
- Lower thermostat settings while still providing a more comfortable home
- Educated homeowners who learn to change furnace filters, put plastic on windows, use low-volt lighting, and better care for their home
